Goals:

My primary goals included improving the quality of life for underprivileged children by teaching them essential skills such as reading, writing, and basic mathematics like addition, subtraction, and multiplication to help them tackle necessary life situations. Additionally, I aimed to provide and distribute NGO provided meals to these children. Another key objective was to teach life skills including basic hygiene, nutrition, and financial literacy, and to motivate students to focus on their studies while developing these essential life skills.

Achievements:

I enhanced my communication and teaching skills significantly. Throughout this experience, I improved both my verbal and non-verbal communication skills through teaching. I developed the ability to adapt my teaching styles to meet students' needs, ensuring maximum engagement. This experience fostered my adaptability by modifying lesson plans on the go to create an inclusive learning environment. In terms of leadership and organizational skills, I strengthened these by setting clear objectives, structuring lesson plans, and organizing group activities. Working closely with students enhanced my empathy and patience, creating a nurturing environment for their growth. On a personal level, I gained practical experience and personal growth by gaining insight into the functioning of NGOs and educational institutions. This experience developed my passion for bridging educational gaps and empowering underprivileged children. Emphasizing continuous learning and growth by delving deeper into subject matter and incorporating new teaching techniques has also been a notable achievement.

Plan and Adherence:

My plan and adherence were well-structured. In Week 1 (7 June - 13 June), I focused on basic hygiene and nutrition, basic reading and writing skills, with activities that included food distribution (Muskmelon Slices), interactive storytelling, and art and craft sessions. In Week 2 (14 June - 20 June), the focus was on healthy eating and an introduction to English alphabets and the solar system, with activities that included food distribution (Banana Chaat), drawing and coloring, singing and rhymes, and interactive quizzing. During Week 3 (21 June - 27 June), I focused on basic financial literacy and basic mathematics, with activities such as food distribution (Bread Pakora), homework assignments, and outdoor games. Week 4 (28 June - 4 July) was centered around teamwork, basic human anatomy, and effective communication, with activities like food distribution (Orange Slices), educational games, group activities, and revision sessions. In Week 5 (5 July - 11 July), the focus was on planning and organization, writing short stories and essays, with activities including planning and grading of homework, feedback sessions and food distribution (Samosa). I adhered to my plan by maintaining a detailed log of activities and hours, planning daily activities including food distribution, teaching sessions, and interactive games, and documenting weekly assignments and progress.

Future Goals:

My future goals include continuous support and mentorship, where I am dedicated to providing ongoing support to students beyond the summer camp, sharing educational and career opportunities, as well as updates on institute events. Advocacy is also a key future goal. I aim to advocate for quality education and equal opportunities for all students, especially those from underprivileged backgrounds. Raising awareness about the challenges faced by underprivileged students through campaigns, workshops, and community engagement is part of my advocacy goals. Personal and professional growth is another future goal. I plan to engage in continuous learning through professional development programs and workshops, stay updated on educational advancements to provide relevant and effective support to students, and leverage IT tools to improve educational activities and ensure sustainability beyond the camp duration.
